"The Art of Healing had its origin in the Woods, and the Fobol is still the best Medical School."
The Author of our experience has perceived certain outlets, through which all excess and corrupt humors are expelled from the system; these are natural drains of the body; and when they are all kept open, and discharge freely their respective duties, the body will continue in health. The skin, after making proper food, breathing pure air, using exercise, or any other means, these outlets become closed, the humors will continue to accumulate, until the body is literally overflowing with disease. If the channels of our sight, vision, hearing, smell, taste, or touch, are closed, the natural drains become closed, the accumulated impurities will ever eventually find vent in some form of disease, or death will be the certain consequence.
